Empowering Sri Lanka's IT Future: Platned's Commitment to Talent and Growth

Earlier this month, Paul Massey, Platned's non-executive Director, wrote a blog post sharing his insights on the future of Sri Lanka's IT landscape.

Having had the pleasure (and honour) to be at the recent opening of Platned's impressive new offices in Colombo, it got me thinking again about the importance of Sri Lanka in the development of so many successful IT companies.

Auto Windscreens Testimonial

“Our goal was to bring control back in house for areas like mobile and customer engagement, investing in training and embedding skills to service the business more quickly, by late April 2023 it was clear that we did not have the time, skills or resource to manage the mobile transition internally. At that point I reached out to Chris Finch, a Business Development Manager at Platned who we’d worked with before via IFS. Within days we had Kasun, a Platned consultant on-site with us, reviewing our processes and how the baseline version could meet our needs. By working through and rationalising our screen sets and workflows together, we were quickly able to reduce the number of interactions needed, saving technicians time and effort on every visit. That equates to a 20% reduction in screen workflows required. The consultant did everything they said they would and delivered everything promised on-time and under budget. The quality of output and the depth and level of documentation is first-class.”
